

Everyone values family and when you are fortunate enough to connect with a relative that you haven't met it becomes even more special. Recently Victor Efimoff had just that experience. Out Reach Worker Lori Hansen and Victor were having lunch and during the course of their conversation Lori was checking her cell phone when she asked Victor if they should check Facebook to see if they could find any of his relatives? He thought it was a great idea - so off they set. With in moments they discovered a lady with the same last name and her photo was on her site. Victor immediately recognized her, as she looked like a family member. He became very excited. Through Facebook Lori initiated contact. The following is an excerpt of the messages back and forth.

Victor & Lori

Victor says "I want to meet them (family members) in person and find out more about them and their stories".
